The late James Fisk, jr., asserted, just before his death, that he owned a large amount of Erie stock, and such was supposed to be the case, but all efforts to find any record of the same since he died have been in vain, and suspicious are entertained of foul play on the part of those in whose names the stock was held.

THE CHURCH MUSIC ASSOCIATION.

The great feature of the concert of the Church Music Association last night was Beethoven's Mass in D. This is a composition of stupendous difficul-ties, not much less formidable than the Choral Symphony. It was written in the last period of the master's life, when the grandeur of his conceptions seemed to soar so far beyond ordinary forms of expression that they were often thought to be impossible of execution. Properly performed, the works of this period are the most sublime and impressive in the whole range of music; but when the orchestra is imperfectly trained and the chorus weak, ragged, and uncertain, there is no musie more disappointing. Whether to praise the Church Music Association for their zeal in presenting this Mass for the first time to an American audience, or to blame their rashness in attempting a task for which they were so obviously unfitted, we find it difficult to decide. Their chorus, which is the weakest for one of its size, and the crudest for one of its pretensions that we ever heard, is very far from having attained the necessary discipline for such serious business, and the most we can say for it is that it got through without any great catastrophe. The author of the programme deprecated criticism on account of the immense difficulties of the score and the few weeks allowed for preparation. But meager preparation is not an excuse, for the Association was under no compulsion to bring out the Mass until it had been sufficiently rehearsed. The solo parts, which are quite as difficult as the chorus, were intrusted to Madame Jaworska, Miss Antonia Henne, Mr. Leggatt, and Mr. Remmertz. Madame Jaworska was very bad, Miss Henne good, Mr. Remmertz very good, and Mr. Leggatt good now and then.

AN INTERVIEWER INTERVIEWND.

"Gath" of The Chicago Tribune, encountered McCullagh, Managing Editor of The St. Louis Democrat,

McCullagh, Managing Editor of The St. Louis Democrat, at Cincinnati, and reports the confab as follows:

Speaking of interviews. I have had one. I had it on the fly. It was with a former great Chicagoan, burnt out by the fire. He says he invented the interviewing business. This is his own style:

The Managing Editor of The Missouri Democrat, J. B. McCullagh, late "Mack," the correspondent and last proprietor of the defunct Chicago Republican, is if the city. "Mack," said the distinguished representative of the present letter, "why is The Missouri Democrat opposing the movement it began! I tused to be the lion of the Tribe of Judah, and now it coos Grant like a turtle."

"Oh! we are all opposed to Grant." said Mack, "but when the Fishbacks got the paper its course had been defined. Now we have to keep up our consistency."

"How is Missouri going!"

"Missouri is sure for the candidate here. It would vote for Sterling Price if he were alive, the same way. That's the reason it seems to be useless to nominate Gratz Brown. You can have that State for anybody. You ought to put up somebody to carry Illinois or Ohio. Those are the key-States. I don't think any of the candidates named are strong enough. Trumbull is the best."

"What strength will Brown come to the Convention be nominated?"

"In Missouri, yes. But Tom Hendricks and MeDonald, of Indiana, told me yesterday that they wouldn't take Adams. They want Trumbuil or Davis."

"What do you tnink of Davis!"

"He would get votes and be a Whig President. George Morgan is an ass for putting him up. Jim Robinson and The Chicago Times cooked up this nomination with Morgan. Old Davis is the only man named who would bleed freely for the campaign. He could afford to spend the supporters of Brown and Trumbuil. Davis and Pai-The A. M. E. General Conference met at 10 m. yesterday, and listened to a long address in which Bishop 8. T. THE PRESIDENCY AND THE PRESS.

The efforts made to nominate Horace Greeley for the Presidency or Vice-Presidency at Cincinnati are earnest and sincere. His services to the country have been great, and as one of the founders of the Republican party many of his friends believe that he is entitled to its support for the Presidency. But there are others that hold entirely opposite opinions. Mr. Greeley has been editor of The Tribune for many years, and has been editor of The Tribune for many years, and has been editor of the great educators of public opinion. He has impressed the stamp of his individuality upon his time. If experience is to be regarded, it must be admitted that great ability is not required in a President of the United States. We look over the list and find the names of many men who were of mediocre ability. Polk, Pierce, Harrison, Taylor, Fillmore and others were far excelled by hundreds who mingled with them in public life, but were not what is called "available" as candidates. Henry Clay and Daniel Webster were to great to be elected. Now Mr. Greeley is infinitely superior, intellectually, to such Presidents as we have named. Greeley in the White House would be a positive power; he would be respected, and it is because this is known that he is so strongly urgea upon the Cincinnati Convention. But other reasons exist why Mr. Greeley should not be a candidate. Mr. Greeley might be a good President, but how few men could be found to take his place as editor of The Tribune. If Greeley might be a good President, but how few men could be found to take his place as editor of The Tribune. The condition of the White House, but there are competent to be occupants of the White House, but there are very few who could do what Horace Greeley has done in American journalism. To be the editor of The Tribune is to have more power, to do more good, to exercise greater influence, than to be President of the United States. Were Mr. Greeley able to choose between the Presidency and The Tribune, he could do nothing nobler than to say, "I will stay

HORRIBLE MURDER IN JERSEY CITY.

At 6 a. m. yesterday Officer Garvey of Jersey City was informed by John Dean that the body of a man had been discovered in the basement of the house No 100 Dudley-st., near [Warren-st. He went to the house and at the bottom of a flight of stairs leading to the cellar found the body of a man, with his head in a large pool of blood. It was ascertained that the murdered man was Fritz Dabelstein, a German. He had received two severe wounds, one two inches long, near the right ear, the other six inches long, near the right hip. Coroner Burns took charge of the body.

It was subsequently ascertained that Henry Losche had threatened to take the life of the murdered man, and he was arrested. The prisoner had also threatened to kill Paul Klentworth and several other persons, but stated that his trunk was locked, and as he had lost the key he could not procure his knife. The trunk was found broken open, and a knife with a four-inch blade was taken from the prisoner's pocket. When ques-tioned, he denied having quarreled with the deceased, and stated that he had not seen Dabelstein since 4 p. m. Wednesday. He was remanded to jail to await the result of the Coroner's inquest.
